THREE IMPORTANT JUVENILES

Fighting With Fremont

A Tale of the Conquest of California

By EVERETT McNEIL

Author of "With Kit Carson in the Rockies," "In Texas with David Crockett," etc. Illustrated, 12mo.....$1.50

The story of how California was won for the Union by the hardy pioneers of the West, under John C. Fremont, and other heroes of '46.

The capture of Acre's horses, the raising of the Bear Flag at Sonoma, the taking of Monterey, and many other historic events figure in the adventures of Thure Conroyal, and many old favorites of romance under the leadership of Kit Carson re-appear in the story.

A story of powerful historic and dramatic interest of the kind that few boys can resist.

Captain Pete in Alaska

By JAMES COOPER WHEELER

526

Author of "There She Blows!" "Captain Pete of Puget Sound," etc. Illustrated, 12mo.....$1.50

In this new tale of the adventures of Captain Pete, is told the exciting events in Captain Pete's hunt for the mysterious placer gold deposits on the Yukon river, the finding of which precipitated the great Klondike rush. Captain Pete's expedition nearly comes to grief through the pernicious activities of the gang of Chinese pirates and smugglers that had gained an inkling of Captain Pete's objective and were trying to reach the prize first.

Captain Pete's final success is equal to the obstacles overcome, and quite in line with this young hero's former reputation.

Captain Polly of Annapolis

By GABRIELLE E. JACKSON

Illustrated, 12mo.....$1.50

A new story by this favorite writer of girls' books. A story of school-day life introducing a new type of winsome girlhood, who becomes, through the influence of her sister's fiancé, a shipman of Annapolis, a most patriotic young miss, an organizer of a school club to promote patriotism and to honor "Old Glory."

The later portion of the story is laid in Hampton Roads and describes the return of the Battleship fleet from its round the world cruise in 1908.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Boston Evening Transcript,
September 14, 1910, says:

The action is rapid enough to satisfy the most ardent Dumas devotee, but the various characters are sharply, nay almost hardly drawn.

The element of surprise is the most salient and admirable feature of the Baroness Orczy's art, as readers of THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL and her other novels will readily recall. While this element of surprise is not so prominent in PETTICOAT RULE as in earlier books, it nevertheless is the main source of pleasure to the reader, whose indolence may bid him overlook the real artistry of psychological handling which the story reveals.

We recommend the novel to those who made the acquaintance of THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL and I WILL REPAY. It is a successful return to the field which we feared that Baroness Orczy had abandoned.

The Chronicle, San Francisco,

 There are no loose ends in the narrative and the many spectacular situations are never allowed to obscure the subtle studies in the less primal passions. A familiar theme, its treatment is entirely new and the most intimate knowledge of the period will scarcely stand in the way of its enjoyment.

the Lasting Pleasures of Life

THE DURABLE SATISFACTIONS OF LIFE

By CHARLES W. ELIOT

12mo. Cloth. 198 pages. $1.00 net. By mail, $1.10

"The book is one of wonderfully sane and sweet philosophy, a book that ought to be read by every man or woman who is discontented, unhappy, rebellious against the limitations of life. It is eminently practical, and its sturdy, simple reasoning, bent on finding the treasures of the daily, dusty, common life, will be wholesome medicine for those who have come to put too much stress upon the relation of material possessions to happiness."

The White River Raft

By
LEWIS B. MILLER

Illustrated by
J. W. F. KENNEDY

12mo. cloth, gilt
Price, $1.50

THE scene of this stirring tale is laid in the Mississippi Valley more than half a century ago, when the river steamer, flatboats and rafts were the principal means of communication throughout that section. The country was new and scantily settled and the mighty river was not only the main highway through which people had to travel, but also sheltered swarms of pirates and other lawless folk whose activities, together with the perils of storm and flood, often tried the courage and endurance of the voyager. The author does not depend upon superhuman feats or improbable events, finding the stern realities of the time replete with excitement and adventure. It is as described the largely true story of a logging trip into the flooded forests of Arkansas, followed by an eventful raft voyage down the great river to New Orleans.

IF —

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too:
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;

* * * * *

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings — nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And — which is more — you'll be a Man, my son!

By Grace S. Richmond

Author of "On Christmas Day in the Morning," etc.

R. P. BURNS, M.D., whose fiery hair (not to mention a similar temper) earned him the nick-name of "Red Pepper" among his friends, was a country doctor of the old school—one of those whole-souled enthusiasts who would rather relieve some neighbor's suffering than eat his dinner. And Mrs. Richmond, who has clearly studied her hero from life, makes a highly lovable personality out of this impetuous, brilliant, powerful, high-minded young doctor. The author of the delightful "Juliet" stories does not fail to give a charming lightness and feminine grace to the love story which dominates the book.

NEARLY A YEAR AGO

The Rosary was published. The work of an author slightly known, unheralded by special advertising or exploitation, at first it attracted but moderate attention. Soon, however, the reviewers realized the wondrous charm of the book. Then intelligent booksellers began to read it and discovered that rare and peculiar quality that commends it to all classes of readers, men and women, young and old.

Every reader became an enthusiastic advertiser.

LADY GOOD-FOR-NOTHING

By SIR A. T. QUILLER-COUCH

Author of "True Tilda," "Sir John Constantine," etc.

The scene of this delightful romance of the early eighteenth century is laid in this country in the straitlaced colonial times. The heroine, scoured through the streets for some slight Sabbath-breaking, is rescued by a customs officer, an Englishman of rank. What happens to her after that, her love story, her lodge in the wilderness, her voyage to Portugal, and her adventures in the great Lisbon earthquake, make a thrilling story, the most vital and deeply interesting piece of work that "Q" has yet done. There is much of his humor in the book, and of his skill in describing exciting and romantic episodes and quaint characters, and at the same time a greater depth of feeling than ever before.

Some are of Gloucester fishermen, some of the men of the navy, some of the smugglers—in all such is the smack of the salt laden wind; the rattle and creak of ships' tackle; the dull boom of pounding surf, or the hissing crash of the breakers. But there are the other stories of sport and adventure ashore of which, in such, Mr. Connolly has shown his complete mastery.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS announce that "The Rosary" has reached a sale of 100,000 copies, and its author, Florence L. Barclay, has now ready "The Lady of Shenstone," which although in no sense a sequel, again lets its readers meet the delightful heroine of "The Rosary."

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY call attention to notices from papers all across the continent from Boston to San Francisco praising the good work done by the Baroness Orczy in her "Petticoat Rule," a novel of the days of the Pompadour and the many troubles between France and England at a time when France was wholly under "petticoat rule."

DANA ESTES & Co. publish "The White River Raft," by Lewis B. Miller, illustrated by J. W. F. Kennedy. It is a story of the Mississippi Valley, in the times, more than half a century ago, when the river sheltered along its banks bands of pirates and other law-breakers who made life full of danger to travellers on the great river. The author needs no superhuman feats nor improbable events to make the story full of excitement and adventure. The tale he tells is largely true—the story of a logging trip into the flooded forests of Arkansas, followed by a raft voyage down the Mississippi to New Orleans.

THIS week Doubleday, Page & Company announce the following new publications: "Making Life Worth While," by Herbert W. Fisher, which tells how to regain health before losing it; "The Hollow Needle," by Maurice Leblanc, the author of "Arsène Lupin;" "The Healthful Art of Dancing," by Dr. Luther H. Gulick; "The Red Magic Book," by A. A. & E. B. Knipe, a juvenile mechanical book, something after the order of Peter Newell's "The Hole Book;" "Mountain Adventures," by George E. Abrahams; "Presidential Addresses and State Papers," by William Howard Taft, second volume; "Song Surf," by Cale Young Rice, another selection of poems by this Kentucky writer.

Abbott, Eleanor Hallowell. Molly Make-Believe; with il. by Wa. Tittle. N. Y., Century Co., 1910. c. 211 p. S. cl., $1 net.

Miss Abbott has twice won the Collier thousand-dollar prize, once with "The sick-a-bed Lady" and again with "The very tired girl." Here she tells of a very nice man laid up in bed with rheumatism, while his essentially Bostonese fiancée goes South leaving him a circular from The Serial-Letter Co., a concern that undertakes to write real letters from imaginary persons. Cornelia does not know how to write love letters, but the Serial Letter Co. does to perfection, and the story is made up of the letters and their consequences.

Addingley, Amy, comp. In friendship's meditation. N. Y., Platt & Peck, [1910.] c. 132 p. S. cl., 75 c., boxed; ooze, $1.50, boxed. An anthology of friendship. Decorated pages and artistic binding in blue, gold and cream make this a dainty gift book.

Agnetti, Mary Prichard. Vincenza: the home of "The Saint"; with a preface by Antonio Fogazzaro. N. Y., Doran, 1910. 364 p. il. [in color] 8°, $3.50 net.

Allen, A. M. A history of Verona; ed. by E. Armstrong; with 20 il. and 3 maps. N. Y., Putnam, 1910. 10+403 p. O. (Historic states of Italy.) cl., 3.50.

In this book is told the story of the development of the city into a self-governing commune, of the tyranny of Ezzelino de Romano, of the rise and splendor of the Scaligeri, of their downfall, and the final absorption of the city into the Venetian dominions in 1405. Much attention is devoted to the laws and institutions which regulated the daily life of the citizens, and the concluding chapters give some account of the very distinctive schools of painting and sculpture which flourished at Verona from the twelfth century onward. Bibliography (4 p.). Index.

Altsheler, Jos. Alex. The riflemen of the Ohio; a story of early days along "the beautiful river." N. Y., Appleton, 1910. c. 7+354 p. pls. D. cl., $1.50.

A sequel to "The young trailers," "The forest runners," and "The free rangers." In this story Mr. Altsheler has again conducted his band of hunters and scouts over ground made celebrated by warfare and ambushes in the early days of our pioneer life. The book is full of thrilling incidents and episodes, Indian seizure and torture, Indian customs in war and peace, and the graphic narration of decisive battles fought along the Ohio.

American Academy of Political and Social Science. The settlement of labor disputes. Phil., Amer. Acad. Polit. and Social Sci., 1910. 223 p. Q. (Annals.) pap., $1.

American Academy of Political and Social Science. The work of the Consumers' League during the year ending March 1, 1910. Phil., Amer. Acad. Polit. and Social Sci., 1910. 75 p. Q. (Supt. to annals.) pap.

American (The) Jewish year book, 5671; October 4, 1910, to September 22, 1911; ed. by Herbert Friedenwald. Phil., Jewish Pub. Soc. of America, 1910. c. 10+449 p. D. cl., 75 c.

This is the twelfth issue of the year-book. The only important change in it is the omission of the usual article "The year," as "The list of events," arranged by countries, in itself constitutes an account of the year's activities any further comment was deemed unnecessary. The principal article is on immigration, a subject of vital importance to the Jews of the United States. "American Jewish bibliography" (14 p.).

Angus, D. C. Japan: the eastern wonderland; 4 colored plates and numerous black-and-white illustrations. New and enl. ed. N. Y., Cassell, 1910. 8°, $1 net.

Arnold, Matthew. Essays in criticism; 3d series; with an introd. by E. J. O'Brien. Bost., Ball Pub. Co., 1910. c. 296 p. D. cl., $1.25 net.

Atkinson, G. Fs. Botany for high schools. N. Y., Holt, 1910. c. 15+493 p. front. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Author is professor of botany in Cornell University. Book is meant for first and second year high school pupils.

Bagby, G. W. The old Virginia gentleman and other sketches; ed., with an introd., by T. Nelson Page. N. Y., Scribner, 1910. c. '84-'10. 29+312 p. por. D. cl., $1.50 net.

Thomas Nelson Page stands sponsor to this volume of essays, which picture Virginia life before the war. Dr. Bagby was known for a brilliant writer in his day among Virginians, but the storms of war and Reconstruction obscured his talents and prevented any wide publication of his writings, and this is the first time that these essays have been brought together in book form.

Baker, Mrs. Etta Anthony. Frolics at Fairmount; il. by Maud Tousey. Bost., Little, Brown, [1910.] c. 14+408 p. D. (Fairmount girls ser.) cl., $1.50.

By the author of "The girls of Fairmount." This is another book about the girls and their delightful boarding-school. A mystery which affects their relations with a neighboring school, a unique golf match, a burglar, a winter vacation in New York, a candy pull, and the military wedding of a favorite teacher indicate that the girls are well occupied in the leisure hours of the school term which this volume describes. College boys figure more largely than in the first volume, but the girls are still schoolgirls, intent only on wholesome fun.

Bangs, J. Kendrick. Mollie and the Unwiseman abroad; with il. in color by Grace G. Wiederseim. Phil., Lippincott, 1910. c. 261 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Story for children from eight to ten years old. Mollie and her two queer friends, Whistledinkie, the rubber doll, and Mr. Me, the Unwiseman, take a trip to Europe. The Unwiseman prepares himself for all emergencies in the most original way, and the amusing adventures which result from his ignorance will interest small people greatly.

Banks, Emory E. Twentieth century poultry buildings and how to build them. East Pembroke, N. Y., Emory E. Banks, [1910.] c. 20 p. il. plans, O. pap., 50 c.

Barbour, Ralph H. Kingsford, quarter; with il. by C. M. Relyea. N. Y., Century Co., 1910. c. '09, '10. 326 p. D. cl., $1.50. Another boys' school story by the author of "The crimson sweater," "Captain Chub," etc. The boys at Riverport have all kinds of good times; and foot-ball plays a large part in their lives and thoughts. There is some study, plenty of fun, and lots of light-hearted talk; but foot-ball practice, foot-ball business, and foot-ball games are the important things at Riverport.

Barbour, Ralph H. Winning his "Y." N. Y., Appleton, 1910. c. 286 p. pls. D. cl. $1.50.

The scene of this story is Yardley Hall, the school made famous in "Double play" and "Forward pass." Old friends, with some additional characters, are introduced at the exciting "trying out" for a cross country team, and from that point the story moves rapidly on with adventures through the autumn and winter terms, on track, and rink, ending with the climax indicated in the title.

Barker, J. S. Games for the playground; with preface by Dr. Alfr. A. Mumford; with 25 illustrations. N. Y., Longmans, Green, 1910. 12+65 p. D. cl., 60 c. net.

Author is second master, Royal Deaf and Dumb Schools, Manchester. Revives some of the excellent old games which are passing into oblivion. These are not incidentally educational, but purely recreative, and refresh and invigorate the child. Among the many described are whirligig, relieve, leap frog and ducks and drakes.

Barnes, W. Emory, D.D. Lex in corde (the law in the heart); studies in the psalter. N. Y., Longmans, Green, 1910. 12+264 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

Author is Hulsean professor of divinity in the University of Cambridge. Eighteen Psalms are studied, the main thoughts in each being brought before the reader.

Benson, B. K. Who goes there?; the story of a spy in the Civil War. N. Y., Macmillan, 1910. c. '00. 18+485 p. D. cl., $1.50.

First published in 1900 and now reprinted for the ninth time.

Bigelow, J., jr. The campaign of Chancellorsville; a strategic and tactical study; with maps and plans. New Haven, Ct., Yale Univ. Press, [1910.] c. 528 p. Q. cl., $10 net, boxed.

This book is divided into two parts, the first The period of preparation, and the second The period of operation. The author was the one assigned in 1894 by the government to take the position as Professor of Military Science and Tactics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The campaign of Chancellorsville was chosen for the course of lectures as offering greatest scope in military lessons and has been presented with a minuteness of detail made possible by the available material of the records of the Civil War. Other books by the author, "Principles of strategy," "Santiago campaign," etc. Appendices, index and page references.

Blasco Ibáñez, Vicente. La barraca, novela; ed., with introd., notes and vocab., by Hayward Keniston. N. Y., Holt, 1910. c. 14+325 p. por. S. cl., 90 c. Bibliography (1 p.).

Brereton, F. Sadlier. Indian and scout; a tale of the gold rush to California; il. by Cyrus Cuneo. N. Y., Caldwell, [1910.] 368 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This tale of adventure tells how Jack Kingsley's father sought his fortunes at the mines in California during the gold-rush, and how, in course of time, Jack himself made a journey in that direction. Misfortune had dogged him; he was a fugitive from justice, and sought in California security from arrest. His journey thither was marked by a series of adventures, and we find him, along with his scout friends, fighting the redskins, and also white brigands. In the leader of a band of these gold thieves he discovers a man whose evidence can clear him of the charge brought against himself.

Briscoe, Marg. Sutton, [Mrs. A. J. Hopkins.] Bangs, J.; Kendrick, Creevey, Caroline A., and others. Harper's book of little plays; selected for home and school entertainments, with an introd. by Madalene D. Barnum; il. by Howard Pyle and others. N. Y., Harper, 1910. c. 11+141 p. D. cl., $1.

Plays suitable for performance by children from ten to twelve years of age. Contents: The frog fairy; The revolt of the holidays; The Nineteen Club; Familiar quotations; The tables turned; A Thanksgiving dream.

Brooks, Amy. Princess Polly; with il. by the author. N. Y., Platt & Peck, [1910.] c. 252 p. D. (Princess Polly ser.) cl., $1.

Begins a new series, for little girls. Tells of Polly and her best friend, who live in the country and have many happy times together.

Brown, Alice. John Winterbourne's family. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, 1910. c. 454 p. O. cl., $1.35 net.

The reader will meet with only pleasant people whose doings are interesting. The manner in which the hero's male solitude is invaded and set right is amusing and eccentric, and the moral is the exposition of the need of holding to the real things in life, but it is well sugared with humor and sympathy. The author makes her readers like the people whose faults are shown up; the nagging wife with her enthusiasm for what she cannot understand, the lecturer who lets her children run to seed, the girl who affects a liking for what she thinks others admire; but she also achieves the feat of making a wholesome, level-headed girl, who does things instead of talking. By the author of "Country neighbors."

Brown, Demetra Vaka, [Mrs. Kenneth Brown.] Finella in Fairyland; with il. by Agnes Leach. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, 1910. c. 37 p. S. bds., 50 c. net.

By the author of "Haremluk." Tells how Finella, who was not a good little girl, went to Fairyland and was tried for cruelty by Mr. Crow, Mr. Rooster, and the fairies, who taught her how to be kind and good to flowers and animals.

Brown, G. G., comp. The Holy Bible repudiates "prohibition"; compilation of all verses containing the words "wine" or "strong drink," proving that the Scriptures commend and command the temperate use of alcoholic beverages. Louisville, Ky., G. G. Brown, [1910.] c. 103 p. por. O. cl., $1; pap., 25 c.

A Louisville distiller, Mr. George G. Brown, has taken the trouble to collect all the passages in the Bible that mention or refer to wine or strong drink. These he prints in this book, accompanying each quotation with a note explaining the context or his understanding of the passage. In this he is perfectly fair, reserving the expression of his own views for a few pages of "reflections" at the end.

Burgess, Thornton W. Old Mother West Wind; il. by G. Kerr. Bost., Little, Brown, [1910.] c. 160 p. S. cl., $1.

Stories for children of eight, in which the wind and various small animals are personified, yet retain their characteristics.

Butler, Arth. J., ed. The forerunners of Dante; a selection from Italian poetry before 1300. [N. Y., Oxford Univ. Press,] 1910. 35+262 p. D. cl., $2.

The author is professor of Italian literature in University College, London. The poetry is compiled in the Italian from the following poets: King John of Brienne, Rinaldo d' Aquin, Folcalchiere di Siena, Chiaro Davanzati, Bonagiunta la Lucca, Onesto da Bologna, etc. References in notes and index of first lines.

Byington, Edn. Hallock. The children's pulpit. Bost., Pilgrim Press, [1910.] c. 104 p. D. cl., 75 c. net.

These short sermons for children have such interesting titles implying picturesque similes as: Glory of it; Left out; Cup or sieve; Home stretch; The willow; Oh! come on; Rambler rose family, etc.

Caico, Mrs. Louise. Sicilian ways and days; with 128 illustrations. N. Y., Appleton, 1910. 17-279 p. O. cl., $3.50 special net.

The author has lived for many years in Sicily and has been allowed to enter into the real life of the islanders, though as a rule they are suspicious of strangers. Their dress, manners, mode of life and institutions are all intimately described, the christening, betrothal, wedding and funeral ceremonies all being treated at length, as well as the extraordinary ritual practiced on saints and holy days. Index.

Carleton, Guy Monroe. Autobiography of a disembodied soul. N. Y., Vreeland Pub. Co., [1910.] c. '07. 239 p. pls. D. cl., $1.50.

A book relating many tales of death, and supposed entrance into the life beyond, with descriptions of existing conditions there existing. It is a book with the purpose of impressing those who believe in immortality.

Catrevas, Christina. That freshman. N. Y., Appleton, 1910. c. 7+322 p. pls. D. cl., $1.50.

This is a story for girls of class life at a girls' college, the college in this case being Mount Holyoke. The heroine is a very attractive girl, whose impulsive nature gets her into innumerable scrapes, but whose fine attributes of character soon place her in a position of leadership among her classmates. There is much humor in the story and many pictures of Holyoke surroundings and customs are given.

Chambers, G. F. The story of the comets simply told for general readers. 2d ed. [N. Y., Oxford Univ. Press,] 1910. 15+272 p. il. O. cl., $2.

Chambers, Julius. The Mississippi River and its wonderful valley; twenty-seven hundred and seventy-five miles from source to sea; with 80 il. and maps. N. Y., Putnam, 1910. c. 16+308 p. O. (American waterways ser.) cl., $3.50, boxed.

The Mississippi, the great dividing line between the East and West, has played and will always play a mighty part in the country's history. The Spanish conquistadores and the Jesuit fathers paddled over its waters or cut their way through its forests, it has been the witness of fights between the Indians, between Indians and Whites, and between the North and South. Mr. Chambers here records the great events that have been enacted along its course. The illustrations are numerous and good.

Chatterton, E. Keble. Steamships and their story; with front. in color and 64 full-page plates. N. Y., Cassell, 1910. 8°, cl., $5 net.

Chipman, W. Pendleton. The boy pickets; a boy's story of the battle of New Orleans; with 4 half-tone il. by J. Watson Davis. N. Y., Burt, 1910. c. 276 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Clinch, G. English costume from prehistoric times to the end of the eighteenth century; with 131 illustrations. Chic., McClurg, 1910. 22+295 p. O. cl., $2.50 net.

This work does not pretend to be an exhaustive or ambitious study of English costume; merely taking the main points the text has been made subservient in description to the illustrations which have been deemed more satisfactory for the reader. Many authentic sources have been drawn upon for the compilation which one can depend upon for trustworthiness. The author is clerk to the Society of Antiquaries of London and honorary librarian to Association of Men of Kent and Kentish Men. He is the author of many books, among which are "Little guide to St. Paul's Cathedral" and "Old English churches." Index.

Fisher, Herbert Alb. Laurens. Frederick William Maitland, Downing professor in the laws of England; a biographical sketch. N. Y., Putnam, 1910. 179 p. O. cl., $1.65 net.

Frederick William Maitland was born in 1850 in London, descended from a line of scholars and writers. His mother died when he was a baby, and his father twelve years later, so he had little parental influence in bringing up. He went through Eton with average results in studies and athletics. He attended Trinity College, Cambridge, where he failed to obtain a fellowship and returned to London to follow the family example and try his fortune at the bar. He was called to the bar in 1876. In exile from illness and to conquer physical pain many of his books were written, and this biography contains some of his correspondence and relates much of his brilliant career.

Fox, Alice Wilson. Hearts and coronets; a story for young people. N. Y., Macmillan, 1910. c. 8+349 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A young girl going home from school for the Christmas holidays is snowed in on the train with some young people, who take her to their father's great estate and keep her over Christmas. The acquaintance made becomes lasting friendship. The descriptions of Christmas pleasures on an earl's estate are very entertaining. Unforeseen events change the current of affairs and a mystery finally cleared up makes simple, loving little Audrey heir to an unexpected coronet.

The love story of an attractive American girl who travels in Mexico after breaking her engagement to an English lord. The picture of fashionable life in Mexico, the clever people she meets, and the charm of the girl herself, make a pleasant and interesting book.

Goodrich, Arth. F. The yardstick man. N. Y., Appleton, 1910. c. 325 p. front. D. cl., $1.50.

By the author of "Glean o' dawn," "The balance of power," etc. The scene is laid in New York. A man, concentrated upon business and upon conventional success, his wife, desperately restless and dissatisfied in the childless, luxurious life she is living; another man, years before a classmate of the first, who, out of happy-go-lucky knocking about existence in the West has learned a quaint, sound wisdom; and a young country girl who is having her first city experience in the business man's household; these are the leading characters of a swiftly moving story in which a woman's unhappiness and a dramatic financial struggle lead to a stirring, vital climax.

Gould, G. Milbry, M.D. The Infinite Presence. N. Y., Moffat, Yard, 1910. c. 241 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

The author has written a varied number of books, including medicine and philosophy, biography and science. This is a series of lectures of a philosophical tendency dealing with the ordinary-extraordinary things in life from a more or less religious standpoint, tempered with a physician's outlook. The Infinite Presence, as shown in the many wonders of life, Biologic basis of ethics and religion, Role of maternal love in organic evolution, Immortality, and Back to old ways, are the essays contained in the volume.

Grenfell, Sir Wilfred Thomason, M.D. A man's helpers. Bost., Pilgrim Press, [1910.] c. 76 p. D. bds., 50 c. net.

A man's helpers are his Bible, his prayers, his fellowships; and the breadth the author leaves for the individual expression of each of these "helpers" is most encouraging to those finding the formalities of the orthodox expression of the same facts a little trying to follow.

Hyatt, Stanley Portal. People of position; with a front. by H. R: Boehm. N. Y., Wessels & Bissell Co., 1910. c. 8+289 p. D. cl., $1.20 net.

By the author of "Little brown brother," "End of the road," etc. Jimmie Grierson returns from his wanderings to find himself the black sheep of a family of appalling respectability, people of narrow views, the morality of the Pharisee and of a charity limited to the social circle they adorn. He meets a girl who through adversity has been forced to lead an immoral life, and these two finally work out each other's salvation. The book is an arraignment of the smug virtue full of all uncharitableness which never having been tempted never falls.

Thrum, T. G., comp. and tr. Stories of the Menehunes; Hawaiian traditions (from "Hawaiian folk tales"). Chic., McClurg, 1910. c. 38 p. D. bds., 50 c. net.

The Hawaiian history of the Menehunes is of romantic interest to the student of the traditions of different nations. Their origin is shrouded in mystery though they are supposed to be the original people of the Hawaiian Islands. It is granted that they are supernatural and governed by one of higher rank than themselves. They lived permanently in the mountains and were invisible to all but their own descendants whose bidding they did with the aid of supernatural powers. The book is illustrated by photographs of Hawaiian scenes. By the author of "Hawaiian folk tales."

Thurston, Ernest Temple. The greatest wish in the world. N. Y., Kennerley, [1910.] c. 396 p. D. cl., $1.50.

During the second week of her little life Peggy, the heroine, is left under a seat in a Roman Catholic chapel in one of the poor sections of London. A letter confides her to the care of the priest. He and his elderly housekeeper bring up the little waif. The story is entertaining with touches of sentiment and humor. The speculations on life and its happenings are full of pleasant thoughts.

By the author of "The camp-fire of Mad Anthony," etc. The hero is a young man who has a letter from General Washington to General Greene and sees military service under the latter. It is a stirring story of adventure, involving fights with marauding Tories in the Jersey pine barrens and exciting experiences at the siege of Ninety-six and the Battle of Eutaw Springs. In the final chapter, the unknown young soldier turns out to be an old friend of the readers of the Mad Anthony books.

Torrey, G. A. A lawyer's recollections in and out of court. Bost., Little, Brown, 1910. c. 6+227 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

Mr. Torrey was born in Fitchburg, Mass., in 1838 and graduated from Harvard in 1859. He studied law, was admitted to the Bar, and practiced for nearly half a century, rising from a country lawyer to the position of counsel to the Fitchburg Railroad. In writing his reminiscences he has much to say of the different customs of his youth and also of prices and expenses. The changes in the manners of the bar will be especially interesting to lawyers.

Trafton, Gilbert H. Methods of attracting birds. Bost., Houghton Mifflin, 1910. c. 15+171 p. il. D. cl., $1.25 net.

Birds are so useful as insect destroyers that to have them nest in the garden or about the farm is a good thing from a business point of view, aside from the pleasure to be derived from watching them. This book tells how to build houses, where to put them, what food to scatter for the birds and various other methods by which they may be induced to take up their abodes near man.

Van Wagenen, Anthony. Government ownership of railways considered as the next great step in American progress. N. Y., Putnam, 1910. c. 9+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In four-fifths of the nations of the world government ownership of the railways is the rule; the author believes that because they are at the very basis of our economic conditions, they should not be left in private hands to be run for the benefit of a few individuals at the expense of the whole country.

Wells, Carolyn. Betty's happy days; with il. by Reginald B. Birch. N. Y., Century Co., 1910. c. '09, '10. 295 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Betty, the heroine of "The story of Betty," now has everything a girl could wish for, and seems to get an immense amount of enjoyment out of life. Horse parties, celebrations of every kind, a short experience at boarding school and many unexpected "adventures" make this a gay story. Through all Betty is still the simple, warm hearted, roguish girl who makes friends out of the book as well as in it.

Where's master?, by Cæsar. 6th ed. N. Y., Doran, 1910. 53 p. D. bds., 50 c. net.

Cæsar was King Edward's little dog that travelled everywhere with him, slept on the King's bed, and by order of Queen Alexandra marched immediately behind the gun carriage that bore King Edward's remains in the funeral procession. This little book purports to be written by Cæsar and expresses the little dog's perplexed longing for the master who does not return. Rumor says that the author is Queen Alexandra or Princess Victoria.

The Publishers' Weekly

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT

October 1, 1910

The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

ORDERING AS A FAVOR.

THERE is just one reason why a retailer should order goods of a travelling salesman—because he expects to make money reselling them.

There is just one reason why a travelling salesman should sell goods to a retailer—because he believes the retailer should be able to resell them at a profit.

The traveller who begs an order because he is "a new man in the territory" and wants to secure it permanently, or because he is a new man with his firm and "wants to make good;" the traveller who teases for even a little order "just to show that I stopped off and showed you the line;" the traveller who has been "having hard luck all the week" with Smith away and Jones laid up at home with rheumatism and Brown gone out of business, and who "would appreciate a little order to help out my week's showing"—the traveller who does these things is way on the wrong track from genuine salesmanship.

In fact, it isn't salesmanship at all, but charity; and charity alone cannot contribute to the volume of any business long.

The merchant who is already overstocked with the salesman's line, or who has been unconvinced of the merit of the quality, terms or prices of his goods, may, from softness of heart, give in and order a small bill of goods which he knows he doesn't need.

The traveller has had a little temporary boost; but, by the time he calls on that merchant next season, that boost has merely become an additional obstacle to overcome.

Unsold stock on hand is the hardest argument any salesman has to meet; it's harder to controvert than any possible selling talk from a competitor. And the salesman who sells for favor and the retailer who buys as a favor are laying up prospective unsold stock.

Begging orders for personal reasons when you are unable to sell the goods for clean cut business reasons is bad for you, bad for the house you represent, and bad for the man you sell to, a generalization that has been borne out by repeated experience.

THE LITERARY MIDDLEMAN.

EVIDENCE has accumulated of late, says the Springfield Republican editorially, commenting upon Mr. Heinemann's recent attack on the literary agent, that the friendly old days of intimacy between author and publisher are passing, if not in all cases yet past. Perhaps the old days were never so friendly as they seem in the retrospect—it would be difficult to point to a time when there have not been complaints on both sides. It was, indeed, under color of defending the producer, that is to say the author, from the predatory middleman, that is to say the publisher, that the author's agent came into vogue. In theory he was not a new commercial factor but the author's representative, and his function was simply to look after the interests of his client. He was to be essentially a professional man, corresponding to a solicitor in England, where the author's agent got his start. He was to save the delicate nerves and impractical temper of the literary man from the rude buffets of commerce, to exact the pound of flesh as prescribed in the bond, but to be generous and courteous toward his client, making his living, presumably, out of the extra money he could wring from the heartless and grasping middleman. But alas! his only reward thus far for this fine programme, is to be himself denounced as a middleman, a fresh and dangerous parasite preying on literature.

In the beginning, Mr. Heinemann said, the agent had for his sole justification the help he might give to the obscure beginner, with whom publishers did not care to trouble. But all that is changed: "Experience taught the rising agent soon enough that the profit to be got by exploiting the beginner was a modest one; to-day it is a barren enterprise, because there is barely a publisher or an editor who will even look at a beginner's work that comes to him through an agent." So the only field left for the middleman was to "play upon the author's sense of greed," to convince him that his publisher is not giving him enough royalty, or not pushing his books with enough energy, or is cheating him in some way. Thus the agent breaks up the amicable relations between a rising young author and his publisher, gets him for a client and takes his next book to another house, and the next after to a third firm. Thus an author's copyrights are widely scattered, there is no uniform edition of his books, and his reputation has less solidity, because no one has an interest in pushing his works as a whole.

What Mr. Heinemann says of the work of the publishers' travelling salesmen is but human nature; it is hardly necessary to demonstrate the advantage to the author, other things being equal, of having all his works issued by the same house. The trouble is that other things seldom are equal, and it is quite possible that the greed of publishers left the way open for the invasion of the middleman.

The publisher himself, of course, is both historically and in fact a middleman, an interloper who gradually pushed himself in between the bookseller and the author. A graphic account of the curious transition stage in Paris in the early nineteenth century is given by Balzac in "Lost Illusions;" there the bookseller is the great factor, and the author's publisher comparatively insignificant. Thus it will be seen that history repeats itself. The author's publisher was once supposed to be his friend and representative. When he waxed too powerful and rapacious, the author's agent was invented to defend the author's rights. And now it is the agent who is becoming powerful and rapacious, taking only popular authors, and exploiting both them and the publisher.

It was no more than might be expected, for disinterested service is not to be looked for—in making money. The author may find disinterested advice in perfecting his art, but if he wishes to make a living from his books he does well to learn to look after his own affairs. It is reasonable enough for an author who has a surplussage of income and wishes ample untroubled leisure, to turn over his affairs to an agent and give his whole time to study and writing. He must expect to pay for it, but he is the best judge of what leisure is worth to him in dollars and cents. But the author to whom money is an object may as well face at once the fact that every one who looks out for his business interests expects to turn a penny in the process. The more numerous the middlemen, the greater is the leakage of the profits, apt at best to be scanty. It is not every author who can go direct to the people by publishing his own books and selling them by subscription. But every author should be able to muster up enough business ability to make his own bargains and look after his interests with a frank sharpness that would cause respect on both sides. A publisher as intermediary between author and bookseller should be middleman enough.

On the other hand, if publishers wish a return of the old conditions, they should make it plain that they think of themselves in the old way as "the authors' publisher," the business agent and confidential adviser of the writer. It is to be feared that there are publishers who look on a new book much as a city grocer looks on a peck of apples bought from a countryman. Here is the chance for a change for the better. For example, the literary agent, says Mr. Heinemann, has grown haughty, and disdains the new writer. Very well, then it is for the publisher to seek out the new writer and treat him handsomely, coddle him, make him see that there is money for both in eliminating the pay of a needless middleman. It is for him to show by actions as well as words that he is the author's representative, alert for his interests, and ready at any time to show figures or give advice. Such a programme, it should be supposed, would soon cut the ground from under the new middleman, who calls himself literary agent, and it would be an excellent thing for literature by bringing back the needed personal element. Literary workers ought not to be sold quite like soap or lard. At the present moment the domination of the field in this country and England by the literary agent may be justified by necessity, but if so, the publishers have only themselves to blame.

A NEW BOSTON PUBLISHING HOUSE.

AN indication of the progress of the fine and applied arts in the United States appears in the announcement of the formation of the National Arts Publishing Company, with headquarters in Boston. This company, which has been incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts, will at once undertake the publication of several art magazines.

The president of the company is Henry Lewis Johnson, founder of the magazine, The Printing Art, the editorship of which he has just resigned to engage in this larger undertaking. Mr. Johnson has been closely connected with the progress of the Arts and Crafts movement in America. In 1897 he personally organized the Arts and Crafts exhibition at Copley Hall, Boston—the first affair of its kind in this country and one that led to the formation of the Society of Arts and Crafts, of which Mr. Johnson has been a director during the past twelve years. He is also on the printing committee of the newly created apprenticeship course in the Boston public school system, and is president of the Society of Printers.

J. Albert Briggs, treasurer of the National Arts Publishing Company, is well known to the printing and publishing interests as treasurer of the Southgate Press and the Southgate Machinery Company, Boston. As art director and vice-president, the company will have William B. Brown, formerly of the Youth's Companion, and more recently art director of The Matthews-Northrup Works, Buffalo.

The company's photographic work, which will constitute a very important department, will be in charge of William H. Kunz, for several years secretary of the Buffalo Camera Club, and internationally prominent through his remarkable pictorial work and successes in color photography; he has received awards in London, Dresden and Berlin exhibitions.

The secretary is George E. Twitmyer, recently of the executive staff of The Matthews-Northrup Works, Buffalo, and the advertising director E. Parker Archibald, until lately of the University Press, Cambridge.

A magazine of a unique kind which the National Arts Company will begin shortly to publish is one with the striking title, Color. It will be printed with colored illustrations throughout, including the advertising pages as well as the literary section. Such a magazine has never been attempted before on account of the limitations and expense of color plate making. The publication of Color is made possible by a remarkable color process, which it is believed will revolutionize the business of magazine-making. The subject-matter of Color will be drawn from the field of the fine and industrial arts, the text being profusely illustrated with color reproductions made direct from nature.

Another magazine to be published by the National Arts Publishing Company is The School Arts Book, which is already established as an educational journal devoted to the teaching of art and manual training in schools. Henry Turner Bailey, formerly state agent for the promotion of industrial drawing in Massachusetts, and one of the most widely known of American lecturers and writers on the fine arts, will continue to edit this magazine.

Another periodical to be issued by the company will deal with the latest developments in engraving and color printing, under the title of The Graphic Arts Magazine. The close alliance established between engraving and printing and through the remarkable developments in photo-engraving, provide a definite and important field for this publication under the editorship of Mr. Johnson.

The National Art Company's offices will occupy the entire top floor in the recently remodelled New England Building, directly opposite the South Terminal Station.

LUNCHEON TO JOHN BOCKMEYER.

THE exit of Doubleday, Page & Co. from their New York headquarters to their new publishing plant at Garden City, L. I., was the occasion incidentally of a luncheon given to John Bockmeyer, the manager of their manufacturing department by his lunch-hour associates at the "Zum Prälaten," a Bohemian restaurant at Broadway and Thirteenth Street, where for a number of years the mid-day meal has been an enjoyable event for a genial circle. Those gathered for the occasion on September 28 were George Becker, of Becker Brothers; H. S. Baker, of Bobbs-Merrill Co.; Archie Garner, of the John Campbell Co.; Howard L. Rutter, of Robert Rutter & Son; Charles M. Smith, of the Becker Supply Co., and C. M. Libby, of the Caxton Press. The farewell toasts brought forth many expressions of deep personal regard for the genial guest, and many graceful tributes to his genuine qualities of heart and mind.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS: NEW YORK AND ENGLISH AGENTS.

THE New York agency of the University of Chicago Press for supplying the book-trade and filling miscellaneous orders has been transferred to the Baker & Taylor Co., 33 East Seventeenth Street. Any of the publications on the list of the University Press can be obtained through this house. Eastern dealers and customers will save time by ordering in this way.

A change has been made also in the foreign arrangements of this publishing house. Hereafter its agent for the British Empire (outside the Western Hemisphere) will be the Cambridge University Press, of England.

CHECKING FREIGHT BILLS.

THE Canadian Bookseller and Stationer gives some always timely advice on the subject of checking freight bills.

In a great many stores money is being lost every day by the dealer's neglect of freight bills and all matters pertaining to the proper transportation of merchandise. There is good money to be made for the time spent in figuring over freight bills and making out claims for over-charges. It is an easy matter to obtain from the local railway agent and your jobbers the correct freight rates on each class of goods you handle, and this information will enable you to speedily check over the rates charged on your freight bill to see that some railway clerk has not given the shipment too high a rate. A railway clerk who makes an error that costs the company, always has to stand the loss himself. It is only natural then, when there is any doubt on the part of the clerk as to classification, that you be charged the higher rate.

Those dealers who use system in shipping will hardly credit the fact that some retailers return their goods without advising the jobber or manufacturer that the goods are being returned. Many wholesale houses are forced to enter these in an "unknown book" until weeks afterward the matter crops up in settling the account. Do not allow yourself or your draymen to receipt for goods that have not been received. Check the number of packages received against the express receipt or freight bill carefully. If packages are in a damaged condition when received, have your local freight agent endorse "received in bad order" on the freight bill. Then have him come to your store and check the goods over with you after the cases are open. Make a bill against the railroad company for the lost or damaged goods. If unable to get redress from the railroad company, ask your wholesaler to help you.

All railroads have what they call a minimum charge, which is the lowest amount they will charge, no matter how small the shipment. Bear this in mind and it will save you many dollars in a year; when sending in a special order for some small thing, glance around your store and take a squint through your order book and you will invariably find that there is something else that you will soon need that can be ordered with that shipment.

BEST-SELLING BOOKS.

ACCORDING to the Bookman's lists, the six books (fiction) which have sold best in the order of demand during the month of July were:

3. Betty Wales & Co. Warde. (Penn Pub. Co.) $1.25.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MRS. G. M. HAYMAN, an old lady living at Southsea, who died last week at the age of eighty-one, was an intimate friend of Charles Dickens, and is said to have been the original of "Little Dorrit."

J. N. RAWLINGS, for over thirty years associated with the J. B. Lippincott Company, most of the time as head of the Publication Department, died a week ago Sunday at Cambridge, Md., of heart failure. Mr. Rawlings was fifty-seven years of age.

THE REV. LOUIS ALBERT LAMBERT, editor of the Freeman's Journal and author of "Notes on Ingersoll," "Tactics of Infidels," "Thesaurus Biblicus," "Christian Science Before the Bar of Reason," and half a dozen other well-known volumes, died Sunday at Newfoundland, N. J. He was born in Allentown, Pa., in 1835, and educated at St. Vincent's College and the Missouri Archdiocesan Seminary. When the Civil War broke out Father Lambert was appointed chaplain of the Eighteenth Illinois Infantry. He remained with the regiment through their campaigns in Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi. In 1868 he was made professor of moral philosophy at the Paulist Institute in New York. In 1877 he founded the Catholic Times at Waterloo, N. Y., his parish at the time. While there his attention was called to some articles by Robert G. Ingersoll in the North American Review. He replied to Colonel Ingersoll in a series of newspaper articles, which were later published in book form—"Notes on Ingersoll"—and which ran through ten editions in about as many months. Two years afterwards W. B. Lacy published a "Reply to the Rev. L. A. Lambert's 'Notes on Ingersoll.'" This brought out from Father Lambert quickly a response, "Tactics of Infidels." These two volumes by Father Lambert have been regarded by eminent Protestants as well as Catholics as models of controversy for Christian truth.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE October Century contains an article by William J. Neidig, of the University of Wisconsin, on "False Dates on Shakspeare Quartos," in which the writer illuminates this question with a new method of proof, a unique method of measuring type somewhat similar to the Bertillon system of measuring criminals. The article is illustrated with some interesting photographs of the original title-pages. By a careful study of the peculiarities of the type and space on the title-pages of these quarto editions, some valued at $30,000, Mr. Neidig asserts that copies of the quartos dated 1600 and 1608 were really printed in 1619, after Shakespeare's death, and not during his lifetime, as Shakespearian scholars had hitherto assumed. The work was done on copies of the books in American libraries.

THE New York Ledger, a weekly Democratic newspaper, is about to become a daily morning newspaper. The Daily Ledger will cost one cent, and the first edition, the publishers say, will consist of 50,000 copies. The Long Acre Publishing Company which owns it is capitalized at $500,000. The Ledger was established in August, 1908, by Thomas C. and John M. Quinn, widely known in Democratic circles of the city.

THE Nashville American was sold last week to Luke Lea, of Nashville, and his associates, who also control and publish the Nashville Tennessean. The purchasers of the American say they have not yet completed their plans, but it is understood that the two newspapers will be consolidated within the next few days. The American has been a pronounced Democratic and anti-prohibition paper. The Tennessean, formerly edited by the late ex-Senator E. W. Carmack, is strong in its advocacy of State-wide prohibition, and has aggressively opposed Governor Patterson. It is now supporting for Governor B. W. Hooper, the Republican nominee, who was recently indorsed by the Independent Democratic Convention.

THE October Bookman has, besides its series on "The Craftsmanship of Writing," a special article, "Planting a Play," a discussion of the difficulties of placing dramatic mss. In lighter vein is Edna Kenton's "The Heroine and Her Clothes," in which we learn that Robert Chambers bears off first prize for "sartorial plums, juicy and delicious," as well as something of the "bathtub cult" of David Graham Phillips's heroines, and of O. Henry's impressionistic touches of dress description as compared with Gertrude Atherton's carefully wrought effects. Captain James Churchill, of the New York police force, has something to say on "Novels of Broadway Life" in the series of "Inside Views of Fiction," and there are several dramatic articles, one a review of some of London's last season's successes—due here this fall.

PERSONAL NOTES.

HOMER R. DENISON, who has been with the Edward P. Judd Company, of New Haven, Conn., for ten years, has resigned his position, and will take up professional studies.

RICHARD HURST, of Hurst & Co., returned September 19 from a three months' trip through Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France and England.

A. RADCLYFFE DUGMORE, F.R.G.S., author of "Camera Adventures in the African Wilds," has recently returned from a very successful lecture trip in Canada.

PROFESSOR FERRERO, writing in the Paris Figaro, pays high tribute to the late Professor William James. He holds that the American philosopher's "Pragmatism" offers to Europe the first practical ground for the conciliation of the present religious, philosophic and scientific strife.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE National Association of Postmasters of the First Class, in convention last week at Richmond, Va., endorsed the parcels post.

SIR OLIVER LODGE's new book, to be published this fall by Moffat, Yard & Company, and hitherto unnamed, will be entitled "Reason and Belief."

MESSRS. REBMAN announce "The Meaning of History," by Dr. Max Nordau, which includes discussions of "Society and the Individual," "The Psychological Roots of Religion," and "Eschatology."

ONE western bookstore in a college town has started a "Buying League" to confound the competition of the local college "Co-op." Membership in the "League" costs students $1; they are then given 10 per cent. discount on all purchases.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS will bring out two new books this autumn. One, "Pietro of Siena: a Drama," will be published October 4; the other, which will appear later in the season, is a poem, "The New Inferno."

THE JOHN LANE COMPANY are publishing this week the following books: "Landscape Gardening Studies," by Samuel Parsons; "Charles de Bourbon," by Christopher Hare; "One Hundred Masterpieces of Sculpture," by G. F. Hill; and "A Queen at Bay," by Edmund B. D'Auvergne.

GEORGE MACAULAY TREVELYAN is to write the life of John Bright. Mr. Trevelyan is a grand-nephew of Lord Macaulay and the son of the Right Hon. Sir George Otto Trevelyan. He married Miss Janet Penrose Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphry Ward.

THE BALL PUBLISHING Co., Boston, have been obliged to postpone the publication of "The Mutt and Jeff Cartoons," by Bud Fisher, for fifteen days in order that 50,000 more copies may be gotten ready for the first great demand. All are to have a square deal, so all must wait for this second great printing.

LITTLE, BROWN & COMPANY have ready

"The Story of Worcester," by Thomas F. O'Flynn, a guide to and history of the famous old Massachusetts town; and Adelaide Keen's "With a Saucepan over the Sea," a volume of over six hundred recipes from Europe and America.

RUDYARD KIPLING will publish early in October a volume entitled "Rewards and Fairies," illustrated by Frank Craig. The eleven stories are written on the lines of "Puck of Pook's Hill," with illustrative poems interspersed among the tales and some of the characters reintroduced from the earlier work.

PAUL ELDER, the San Francisco stationer and book publisher, is starting his holiday season a bit early in the display of wooden toys in the shape of animals. Mr. Elder's "magazine edge" note paper has been very popular this season, and, being a designer of monograms, Mr. Elder has had most of the city's choicest patronage.

THE CENTURY COMPANY have just published a book that will appeal to every lover of stirring tales of adventure in Captain Charles Gilson's "The Refugee." The scenes are set near the east coast of England during the French Revolution, and some of the characters are real people from the pages of history.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY have ready for immediate publication "English Literature During the Lifetime of Shakespeare," by Felix E. Schelling, professor in the University of Pennsylvania. The book shows the dominant power of Shakespeare in Elizabethan literature. The treatment takes a large view of the period by its recognition of a succession of literary movements.

IN "Bermuda, Past and Present," published September 16 by Dodd, Mead & Company, Walter B. Hayward has produced a very useful book for intending tourists this winter. It is not only a guide book, but a very interesting history of Bermuda. During the War of 1812 and later during the Civil War, when it was the mecca for blockade runners, Bermuda had some exciting incidents in its history.

RALPH HENRY BARBOUR's annual holiday gift book, without which the holiday season would hardly seem complete, was published this week by J. B. Lippincott Co., under the alluring title of "The Golden Heart." Clarence F. Underwood has contributed some of his best drawings, which have been beautifully reproduced in color, and there are besides dainty marginal decorations on each page, and decorative end-pages.

As a substitute for the Christmas card, the Sturgis & Walton Company offer (at the small cost of 25 cents a volume) in the Remembrance Booklets, little books in parchment and red-and-gold covers. The series already includes eight volumes: 1, "Popular Carols;" 2, "Ancient Carols;" 3, "Sayings of Dr. Johnson;" 4, "Thirty Sonnets;" 5, "Lyrics from Tennyson;" 6, "Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám;" 7, "Lyrics from Browning;" 8, "Sayings of Sydney Smith."

THE jurors at the Brussels Exhibition have awarded 19 Grands Prix to British exhibitors in the classes concerned with books and their production—printing, paper and binding—and of these the Oxford University Press has obtained no fewer than seven. No other exhibitor obtained more than one Grand Prix in these classes. The Oxford University Press has repeated the success gained at the Paris Exhibition (when three Grands Prix were awarded) in being the only British binding house to obtain the highest possible distinction.

"SICILIAN WAYS AND DAYS," by Louise Caico, a book just published by D. Appleton & Co., is an intimate study of the island by one who has spent years there, living in close touch with the people and travelling about the country where her husband is interested in the sulphur mines. The volume is profusely illustrated. Three juveniles are also just issued by this firm: Christina Catrevas's "That Freshman," a story for girls; "Winning His 'Y,'" by Ralph Henry Barbour; and "The Riflemen of the Ohio," by Joseph A. Altsheiler, both stories for boys.

APROPPOS of the discussion concerning the life of books, Frederick A. Stokes Co. have given out the following dates of editions of the "Glory of the Conquered," by Susan Glaspell, the first novel by an unknown author. First edition, January 16, 1909; second edition, February 26, published March 12; third edition, March 26; fourth edition, June 8; fifth edition, July 9; sixth edition, July 30; seventh edition, October 9; eighth edition, November 26; ninth edition, April 13, 1910; tenth edition, August 4. The tenth edition is almost exhausted, and the publishers are on the point of ordering the eleventh.

FUNK & WAGNALLS have just published "The Care and Training of Children," by Le Grand Kerr, M.D. In many homes to-day the methods of modern physicians in the care of children are replacing the historical "treatments" of the old family nurse—much to the advantage of the growing generation. Dr. Kerr is a prominent Brooklyn physician of many years' experience, and already known as the author of several books dealing with infants and young children. This book concerns the mental and moral training of children, as well as their care in both sickness and health.

THE following books are published to-day by Houghton Mifflin Co.: "A Man's Man," a novel by Ian Hay, author of "The Right Stuff"; a "Life of John Brown," by Oswald Garrison Villard, which promises to rank among the most important biographical and historical works of the year; "The Crashaw Brothers," a story of school-boy life, by Arthur Stanwood Pier; "Little Girl Blue," a charmingly illustrated book for little folks, by Josephine Scribner Gates; and a collected edition of Sarah Orne Jewett's "Stories and Tales," in a set of seven volumes.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & COMPANY have ready an extended work on "The Literature of the South," by Montrose J. Moses. The book comprises a study of the subjects from its beginning to the present time, and includes criticisms of all the modern Southern writers. This work is the result of several years' research and study on the part of the author. Also ready is "Switzerland, its Scenery, History, and Literary Associations," by Professor Oscar Kuhns, of Wesleyan University. It is the outcome of many long visits to that land of glorious mountains and beautiful valleys.

A MOST exhaustive study of "The Campaign of Chancellorsville" from the strategic and tactical viewpoints is by John Bigelow, Jr., Major U. S. Army, retired, and author of a number of military works. The author was assigned by the Government in 1894 to the professorship of military science and tactics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The Chancellorsville campaign was chosen for the course of lectures, and this volume is the result of the research made by Major Bigelow for his college work. Yale University Press publishes the book, which is illustrated by many maps and plans.

A. C. McCLURG & COMPANY announce that they are now the publishers of Edgar Beecher Bronson's "Reminiscences of a Ranchman," formerly published by the McClure Company. The same house have ready a little volume of tales from "Hawaiian Folk Tales," which have been collected by Thomas G. Thrum, the compiler and translator of the larger volume. "Stories of the Menehunes" is the title of this latest collection, and it tells of a queer race of supernatural beings supposed to inhabit the Hawaiian Islands; and William Otis Lillibridge's "Quercus Alba, the Veteran of the Ozarks," the brief record of the growth of a giant white oak in Missouri.

AMONG the fall juvenile publications of W. A. Wilde Company are "Midshipman Ralph Osborn at Sea," a story of midshipman life at sea, and continuing "Ralph Osborn—Midshipman at Annapolis," by Commander Edward L. Beach, U. S. N.; "With the Flag in Panama," a story of the construction of the Panama Canal, by Hugh C. Weir; "The Pilot of the Skylark," a story of how an enterprising boy became a master air man in the U. S. Army, by Isaac Russell; and "Betty Gaston—the Seventh Girl," a story by Marion Ames Taggart. All are fully illustrated. They also announce "The Teaching of Citizenship," by Edwin H. Hughes.

"THE MERCY OF FATE," by Thomas McKean, will be published early in October by Wessels & Bissell Co. "The Mercy of Fate" is a vivid story of a self-made American millionaire of humble origin, of imperfect rather than defective education, of uncouth rather than boorish manners, who enters the inner labyrinth of New York society. The mistake of his early youth pursues his progress doggedly, and notwithstanding the developments of his character, the apparent success of his love affair and the consummation of his social ambitions, he is called upon to make retribution at the eleventh hour. A satire at once keen and kindly of a certain class of much advertised society and the life story of a man of singular complexity of character.

THREE books come to us from George H. Doran Company: "Derby Day in the Yukon and Other Poems of the 'Northland,'" by Yukon Bill; "The Other Side," by Horace Annesley Vachell, a story of a musical genius who passes from triumph to triumph into disillusionment, till through an accident he steps across the border on to "the other side," whence he views his own and other men's careers with clearer eyes, and then returns to this world to live the short remainder of his days. A pathetic little book which purports to be written by Cæsar, King Edward's little dog, is "Where's Master?" Whose hand guided Cæsar's paw is not known, but it is rumored that either Queen Alexandra or Princess Victoria is responsible for the book.

THE report of the World's Missionary Conference recently held in Edinburgh is to be published in this country by Fleming H. Revell Company, in nine 12mo volumes of over 300 pages each. A volume is devoted to each of the eight special topics dealt with by the conference. The ninth volume contains a summary and complete index of the whole. The price is but nominal for so extensive a work—$5 net for the set. In addition the Revell Company will issue at the same date, about October 1, the officially prepared single volume popular study of the conference, under the title "Echoes from Edinburgh, 1910," by W. H. T. Gairdner, $1 net. The Continuation Committee, of which John R. Mott is chairman, has sent out an urgent plea to the friends of Foreign Mission work to give wide circulation to this campaign volume.

AMONG recent English publications which may interest American readers are Blackie & Son's publication of the "Poems by Christina Rossetti," with 36 colored and 36 full-page black-and-white illustrations by Florence Harrison and an introduction by Mrs. Meynell; and Methuen's "King's Favourites," in which Francis Bickley has gathered the stories of some of the men and women who, during the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, found perilous favor in the eyes of princes. Agnes Sorel, Diane de Poitiers, Gabrielle d'Estrees, Alice Perrers, Jane Shore, Gaveston, Leicester and Alvaro de Luna—all are here. There are also two recent volumes of verse of interest. Andrew Melrose publishes "Ballads from the Danish, and Original Verses," by E. M. Smith Dampier, which are full of vigor and spirit. T. Fisher Unwin has "South Africa, and Other Poems," by A. Vine Hall, which is prefaced by a commendatory letter from Rudyard Kipling.

FROM G. P. Putnam's Sons we have received five books of varied interest. "The Mississippi River and its Wonderful Valley," by Julius Chambers, is a profusely illustrated account of the great events that have been enacted along the course of the river, as well as a description of the mighty stream. A new volume in The States of Italy Series is "A History of Verona," by A. M. Allen, in which will be found the story of the city's development and the legends connected with it. Two books with political themes, though widely separated in point of time, are A. Van Wagenen's "Government Ownership of Railways" and Luther Hess Waring's "The Political Theories of Martin Luther." In "Hypnotism and Suggestion in Daily Life, Education and Medical Practice," by Bernard Hollander, we have the result of investigations by a physician who has spent much time in studying the subject from the medical point of view.

CONTRIBUTING to a current London discussion regarding the "proper" length for novels, George Bernard Shaw says characteristically: "In my opinion fiction should be sold by the pound, as blue books are. I attribute a good deal of the steadiness of my own market to the fact that I have always thoroughly understood that people have to lay in a household store of reading, just as they have to lay in a household store of tea or cheese, and that they expect four-and-sixpence worth of it to last a certain time. I should like to take this opportunity of informing my customers that my next volume will contain three complete plays and three prefaces comparable to royal commission reports on subjects of universal interest. It will keep an average man of business in active reading for a fortnight, and will last the family fully a month, and it will bear reading over again once every eighteen months for life. This estimate does not include reading in bed."

E. P. DUTTON & Co. continue the adventures of Captain Pete, the young hero of "Captain Pete of Puget Sound," in an equally exciting romance, "Captain Pete in Alaska." James Cooper Wheeler tells in this tale how the hero set out for the mysterious placer gold deposits on the Yukon, the finding of which brought about the great Klondike rush, and how a gang of Chinese pirates and smugglers came upon the scene, with exciting results. Everett McNeil's "Fighting with Fremont," another boy's story, shows how California was won for the Union by John C. Fremont and other daring adventurers of '46. The story brings out the dramatic charm of the pioneer days. "Captain Polly of Annapolis" is the odd title of Gabrielle E. Jackson's new story, which tells of the school-day life of a girl who becomes, through the influence of her sister's fiancé, a midshipman at Annapolis. In the latter part of the story the scene at Hampton Roads, when the battle-ship fleet returned from the famous cruise of 1908, is pictured stirringly.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY issue a work of more than ordinary interest to those who care to see grave questions gravely handled by a man who from his first entrance into public life was immersed in great affairs and passionately interested in the issues involved in them. This is the "Correspondence on Church and Religion of William Ewart Gladstone," selected and arranged by D. C. Lathbury, in two octavo volumes profusely illustrated. The selections have been made by the editor with unusual care and the work will be an excellent supplement to Morley's "Life of Gladstone," with which it is uniformly bound. From the same house comes "The Building of the Church," by Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, and a thoroughly up-to-date Shakespeare manual, "An Introduction to Shakespeare," by H. N. MacCracken, F. E. Pierce and W. H. Durham, all of the Department of English Literature in the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have ready among others a volume of essays for which Thomas Nelson Page stands sponsor in an introduction, and which gives a picture of ante-bellum days in Virginia. The book is by George W. Bagby, and is called "The Old Virginia Gentleman and Other Sketches." Dr. Bagby was known for a brilliant writer in his day among Virginians, but the storms of war and reconstruction obscured his talents and prevented any wide publication of his writings. A bright little story told in letters from an American travelling man in Mexico is "The Star-gazers," by A. Carter Goodloe, while in "Cupid's Cyclopedia," purporting to be compiled for Daniel Cupid by Oliver Herford and John Cecil Clay, will be found a daintily made-up small volume of clever fooling. An addition to the International Theological Library is "Christianity and Social Questions," by W. Cunningham, D.D., Archdeacon of Ely. Howard Pyle has written and illustrated a handsome book for children, "The Story of the Grail and the Passing of Arthur," a companion volume to his "The Story of Sir Launcelot and His Companions."

VERY timely is Agnes C. Laut's "conservation novel," "Freebooters of the Wilderness," which Moffat, Yard & Company announce for October publication. A Western woman all her life till ten years ago and a constant visitor to the West since she moved to the East, Miss Laut has grasped the salient features of the big fight going on in the West between the public and that small section of the public which a certain famous gentleman designated as "the instruments of Providence to control the wealth of the nation." The story of the modern fight is likely to prove as intensely interesting as the records of the old fights in fur company days. It is a bit of a shock to be told that, right now in the West, Washington land officers are shot to death investigating coal steals, sheep herders burned alive in their wagons, and as many as 60,000 sheep clubbed to death in two counties by cattlemen representing certain senatorial interests. It is something new to be told that lumber barons have pre-empted million acre tracts of California redwood and Washington spruce by the law of the "greased palm" and the dummy entrymen. These are some of the episodes dealt with in Miss Laut's new novel, which is also a rattling love story.

ONE of the most important works of fiction in a decade will probably be the projected English translation of Romain Rolland's great novel, "Jean Christophe," published in this country by Henry Holt. Of the ten volumes planned by the author for the complete work but seven so far have been published in France. The four first volumes, bearing the subtitles "Dawn," "Morning," "Youth," "Revolt," are comprised in the single bulky volume published here and to be sold at $1.50 net. Each volume rounds out artistically a period or phase in the life of Jean, whose progress and destiny is the theme of the novel, as the spirit of it is music. The book begins with the lad's birth. A remarkable picture is given of his violent father and lovable old grandfather, both musicians, of his childish fears, fancies, and troubles, and through it all we see his intense imagination and almost uncanny musical sense. At seven he plays in public before the Grand Duke, but he is destined to be more than an infant prodigy. Love episodes follow. He visits a great musician, in some ways suggesting Richard Strauss. The great man almost succeeds in wrecking his faith in his career. An idyllic episode with some old men who worship music in a remote village follows. Toward the end of the present volume the musician becomes involved in a riot between villagers and troops, and like Wagner, becomes an exile. The novel is creating a sensation in France, but, except in musical circles, is almost unknown here.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CALGARY, ALBERTA.—D. J. Young & Co., Ltd., have bought the MacKenzie business in Edmonton. That store has been renovated, the stock brought up to date, and with energetic management they look for a good business in that store. This firm in their Calgary store have one of the largest book, stationery and music businesses in western Canada. At the present time they have a staff of fifteen, and they all seem to be busy.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.—J. A. Massie and W. B. Colonna have been appointed receivers in bankruptcy for James F. Abbe, bookseller and stationer.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Madison Bookstore has just opened at 53 East 59th Street, to deal in second-hand and new books.

A MEETING of the creditors of the Circle Publishing Company, of 50 Madison Avenue, New York, was held a week ago Wednesday at the office of Nathaniel A. Prentiss, referee in bankruptcy, at 120 Broadway, and John A. Morrison was elected trustee with a bond of $5000.

PORTLAND, ME.—The Leighton & Valentine Co. has been incorporated as booksellers, stationers, bookbinders, engravers, etc.; capital, $300,000. The president is H. C. Leighton, Portland; treasurer, G. B. Sturrock, New York.

Books Wanted

Under this head booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, repeated matter, and all advertisements from non-subscribers, cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noticed.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm-name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withdrawing their use from irresponsible advertisers, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

JANE HOLLOWAY

Nine brisk and lively stories about boys and girls and dogs by one who knows and loves all three.

Nine photographs from life.
List Price, 75 cents.

MOTHER'S HERO

By ETHEL C. DOW

Author of "The Diary of a Birthday Doll."

A splendid new story for boys and girls which centers around a secret and a surprise. It is fully up to the standard of Miss Dow's earlier work, and the beautiful color pictures by Mrs. S. S. Stilwell Weber add to its value and charm.

Four Color Plates. Six pen drawings.
List Price, $1.25.

THE TURR'BLE TALES OF KAPTIN KIDDO

By MARGARET G. HAYS

Illustrated by Grace G. Wiederseim

A "FLAT" book for younger readers, in which the doughty hero, "Kaptin Kiddo," meets with many and wonderful adventures, and is saved only by his own mighty prowess. The pictures are much superior to those usually offered in this class of work, and the whole book is irresistibly funny.

30 pages. Size 11½ x 16¾ inches.
Price, 35 cents net to the trade.

LIST, $1.50

A STORY of business adventure, in which incidents of romance, intrigue and daring are graphically developed and brought to a happy climax.

The newspaper comments on the business opportunities existing in the South induce a Northern merchant to sell out his store and migrate to that section of the country for the purpose of developing a tract of timber on an abandoned plantation he has purchased. He has some inkling of obstacles to be overcome, and arranges with a police officer to accompany him in the undertaking. Arriving at the town nearest the tract, they at once become the target of secret opposition which they afterward learn originates from a distant community of moonshiners who used an obscure hollow on the tract he had purchased as a distributing depot and objected to the exploitation of the land for fear of discovery.—The rest is too good to tell.

"THE LECTURES OF BRETT HARTE"

TO WHICH IS ADDED

"The Piracy of Brett Harte's Fables"—by CHARLES MEEKER KOZLAY

Fully illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50 net

Of the first edition of 1000 copies (type set and distributed) one hundred have been printed on Abbotsford Deckle Edge Paper and bound in ooze leather, of which eighty copies are for sale at $3.00 net.

No attempt has heretofore been made to publish the lectures of Brett Harte, because of the seeming impossibility of issuing them in complete form, the newspaper accounts giving only those parts which most impressed the reporter, in fact only one lecture, "The Argonauts of '49" seems to have been known to Harte's biographers. This is also the first appearance in book form of Harte's Fables, illustrated, and with an interesting little history of their "Piracy."
